

Contents

- 1 Background Concepts and Goals 1
 - Keeping Animals 1
 - Affective Neuroscience 5
 - Motivation Psychology 6
 - Animal Behavior 6
 - References 8
- 2 Is Wild Animal Behavior a Proper Template for Captive Animal Behavior? 11
 - References 18
- 3 Investigating 19
 - Proximate Versus Ultimate Drivers of Behavior – A Note on Terminology 19
 - Investigation 22
 - Why Investigate? 22
 - Proximate Drivers of Investigation 25
 - Animals Under Human Care Retain Their Drive for Understanding 27
 - References 34
- 4 Acquiring Reward 37
 - Why Acquire Rewards? 38
 - Proximate Drivers of Reward Acquisition 40
 - Acquiring Rewards Supports Welfare of Animals in Human Care 41
 - References 46

5	Exerting Control	51
	Why Exert Control?	52
	Proximate Drivers of Exerting Control	53
	Opportunities to Exert Control for Supporting Well-Being in Captive Animals	56
	References	60
6	Balance: Good Welfare Through Psychological Resilience	63
	References	69
7	Animal Personality: For Every Animal, All Needs Are Important, but They Are Not Equal	73
	References	77
8	Assessment. Asking Animals, “Are Your Needs Met?”	85
	The Balance Sheet Approach Using Direct Observation	86
	Developing Observation Methods	87
	Developing a List of Behaviors to Look for	90
	Assessing the Data	91
	The Balance Sheet Approach – Using Caretaker Interviews	95
	Summarizing the Interview	99
	Direct Tests and Probes for Mood-Like State	101
	Anticipatory Behavior	101
	Cognitive Bias	103
	Novel Objects	104
	Assessing the Opportunities	105
	References	106
9	A Practitioner’s Guide to Meeting the Needs	109
	Supporting Investigation	110
	Supporting the Acquisition of Rewards	117
	Supporting Exerting Control	118
	Availability of Opportunities	122
	Relevance of Opportunities	124
	Ability to Engage	125
	Surrogate Behaviors, Surrogate Behavioral Sequences, and Cross-Domain Carryover of Opportunity Effects	126
	References	128

10	Exceptional Cases: Geriatric, Chronically and Acutely Ill, and Injured Animals	133
	Does the Animal Experience Themselves as Physically Healthy?	136
	Does the Animal Experience Positive Psychological States?	138
	Individual Variation and Ability to Experience Positive Welfare	138
	A Note on Psychiatric Drug Use In Animals	139
	Other Sources of Variation in Ability to Experience Positive Welfare	140
	Does the Animal Experience Independence?	141
	Action-Driven Agency	142
	Caveats	143
	Competence Building Agency	144
	Mitigating Negative Competence Experiences and Providing Positive Ones	146
	Does the Animal Experience Appropriate Social Interactions?	146
	Does the Animal Experience a Complex, Appropriate Environment?	149
	Balance Among Domains	150
	Applying the Balance Model to Assess Exceptional Cases	151
	Justifications for Scoring	152
	Change Over Time	154
	References	156
11	Scenarios	161
	Scenario 1: Rock Hyrax	161
	Scenario 2: Parrot	162
	Scenario 3: Rhino	163
	Scenario 4: Guinea Baboon One	163
	Scenario 5: Guinea Baboon Two	164
	Scenario 6: African Painted Dog	165
	Scenario 7: Reticulated Python	166
	Data Collection – General	166
	Data Collection	167
	Scenario 1: Rock Hyrax	167
	Scenario 2: Parrot	169
	Scenario 3: Rhino	176
	Scenario 4: Guinea Baboon 1	181
	Scenario 5: Baboon 2	187
	Scenario 6: Painted Dog	187
	Scenario 7: Python	187
	Data Interpretation and Suggested Management Changes	190
	Scenario 1: Rock Hyrax	190
	Scenario 2: Parrot	192
	Scenario 3: Rhino	192

Scenario 4: Baboon 1	194
Scenario 5: Baboon 2	195
Scenario 6: African Painted Dog	196
Scenario 7: Python	196
References	197
Index	199